The Fuse

Description: The Fuse serves as an interactive multimedia publication for students at UVA to explore and contribute to the expanding arts and culture scene. We aim to engage and expand the recognition of the various cultural people and events happening in our community and capture the unique UVA lifestyle with dynamic content. Including, but not limited to topics such as fashion, food, and film, The Fuse seeks to keep students up to date on events happening on grounds and in the greater Charlottesville area, make arts and culture more accessible to a wider network of students, connect students making waves in the art scene at UVA, and allow students of all cultural interests to share their stories and experiences.

Fuse aims to be a platform that supports and encourages creativity outside of the classroom for topics that are seldom explored such as fashion and beauty, music, food, and lifestyle as well as more traditional cultural topics such as film, photography, and design to give a unique insight into the students’ lives here at UVA. There are many groups on grounds that explore their own interests and thus have created their own niche, but The Fuse’s mission is to connect and collaborate with all of these groups on grounds and chronicle all cultural content and interests to create a collective body of works that get students talking and interacting with one another in ways they wouldn’t have otherwise.

The HoosHub

Description: We are a non-partisan conservative philosophical and debating society. We meet every week to discuss politics, history, art, literature, science - really anything that comes to mind. Though our common format revolves around presentations by members, occasionally we also hold debates, host prominent speakers, and engage in special events. This last category has included trips to CPAC and the Russell Kirk center in Mecosta, Michigan. Although we do have a common conservative orientation, our membership is open to anyone who would like to join us in seeking the good, the true, and the beautiful through discourse.

The Washington Literary Society and Debating Union

Description: The Washington Society is a group of UVA students (and graduates) dedicated to the principles of free speech and debate. The preamble to our Constitution describes this somewhat more eloquently, as does the Society’s motto: "Quam fluctus diversi, quam mari conjuncti" ("Though the waves are many, the sea is one.") To this end, we meet weekly in a semi-formal setting. Meetings are completely free to the public; anyone may attend and participate. Regular meetings consist of several literary presentations and one debate. The Washington Society, or "the Wash" for short, also engages in activities beyond the regular Thursday meetings. We also have annual oratory and literary contests, the former for non-original works (in the Fall) and the latter for original presentations (in the Spring). We engage our peers, the Jefferson Society, in debate three times a year, at the Harrison Cup humorous debate and the Ethics debate in the Fall, and again at the Smith-Simpson Foreign Policy Debate in the Spring.

Environmental Sciences

Green Grounds

Description: The Green Grounds Group is dedicated to educating and advocating for sustainable planning, design, implementation and operations on the grounds of the University of Virginia.
Formed in 2004 by planning and architecture students to address green design at the University, the group sponsors projects that encompass a range of sustainable design ideas – from green roofs to energy use to transportation. Through each project, Green Grounds works with a diverse set of university stakeholders including administrators, staff, faculty, students and community members.

Holding a strong conviction that the University of Virginia can and should employ sustainable practices as part of their growth strategy, the Green Grounds Group promotes a broad range of projects from minimization of energy consumption to selection of low environmental impact materials to site and building water management to improved indoor air quality.

Charlotteville Leadership Workshop

Description: Charlottesville Leadership Workshop is a one-day workshop UVA students design and put on for high school students in the Charlottesville-Albemarle district. The event is put on in the spring semester (April). Our leadership workshop differs from other workshops as it brings together top student leaders from across the district's high schools to teach them leadership skills, give them a chance to practice these skills in an interactive environment, and build a network of leaders who can draw on the advice and best practices of other schools to improve their own programs. With our dedicated work throughout the fall and spring semesters, each participating high student receives valuable leadership lessons, a workshop booklet with lessons from the day, a t-shirt, and meals for the day free of cost.

Each UVA student is placed in a committee. There is NO application to join our CIO, but each student is required to complete a survey to be placed in a committee that best fits the skills of that student and the needs of the organization.

Day Care (Madison House)

Description: Madison House’s Day Care program aims to serve the children in day care facilities in the community by providing additional individual attention as well as facilitating group activities and supporting the teachers. University of Virginia student volunteers work with teachers to lower the adult-to-child ratio in day care centers around the area. The volunteers provide assistance to day care staff and secondary care for children. In a day care center, the adult-to-child ratio is never small enough and the volunteer can be a big help. The child receives more attention when an extra adult is present. And there can never be too many positive role models in a child’s environment!
There are leadership opportunities: as one of the Program Directors of a child care location, as the Day Care Head Program Director, or as a member of Madison House’s student Board of Directors.

Students for Stop Hunger Now

Description: Students for Stop Hunger Now is an organization that aides the international, non-profit Stop Hunger Now in making a difference in world hunger. Our main goal is to fundraise and package meals for the local community and numerous third-world countries. Every six seconds, a child dies from hunger. Meanwhile, each meal that we'll package only costs 25 cents! Many of the meals we package are for school lunch programs, as an incentive for kids to go to school.

Students for Stop Hunger at the University of Virginia branches off into four committees: sustainability committee, events committee, public relations committee, and fund raising committee. These committees were created in the purpose getting members more involved in the club!

Students Helping Honduras

Description: Students Helping Honduras is a network, a movement, and a team of college students who believe they can make a difference. The mission of SHH is to provide fundamental human needs to orphaned and impoverished children in Honduras, and to spread awareness of these needs through the student body. These fundamental needs include, but are not limited to, educational opportunities, nourishment, access to adequate shelter, clean water, general livelihood, and recreational activities. SHH also works to educate college students about volunteerism, global responsibility, and sustainable development. By utilizing the full range of today's technology SHH cultivates compassion and raises awareness in order to mobilize students across the country. Aside from the continual fundraising efforts of SHH, members contribute to the mission by sharing the experiences of the children in Honduras through services trips over winter, spring, or summer break. The trip will be organized in conjunction with other collegiate chapters of SHH across the country in order for each chapter to have adequate representation for observation, assessment, and planning for future projects in Honduras.
